ELECTRIFICATION NOT FAR AWAY DECLARES NEW HAVEN COUNSEL

William H. Coolidge Says Passage of B. & P. $8,000,-000 Bonding Bill May Start the Work at Once

PLANS UNDER WAY

Proposed Expenditure of New Corporation to Include Extension of Four-Track to Providence

By passage of the bill granting the Boston & Providence Railroad Corporation authority to issue $8,000,000 in bonds, electrification of all the roads en-'tering Boston may be started immediately, said William H. Coolidge, counsel for the New Haven-Boston & Maine system, today. Plans are being worked out naw, continued Mr. Coolidge, though it streets. The old wooden bridge has been may be some time before outward indications of progress will appear.

"This legislation had to go through before any other could be passed," said Mr. Coolidge. "It is simply one of a demolished, preparatory for the building number of steps that must be taken preparatory to the electrification of all of the roads. It is in line with the electrification of the Boston, Revere Beach & Lynn and of the Boston & Maine to Beverly with the construction of the tunnel under Boston harbor. "The New Haven interests in conference with the Boston & Providence directors concluded that the road itself should bear the cost of the change inasmuch as it was a big public improvement and the money expended would all go into the property. The present provisions of the lease declare that all properties shall revert back to the company when the lease expires and the New Haven did not care to expend such a large sum only to lose it at the end of the lease.

MASSACHUSETTS A. C. HAS EIGHT VETERANS TRYING FOR VARSITY

Third Ba. Is Only Position on Nine That Is Without Member of Last Year's Team

HAS HARD SCHEDULE

AMHERST, Mass .- During the past week the baseball team of the Massa chusetts Agricultural College has been improving rapidly. Coach W. P. Fitzmaurice has been working the men at top speed and real form is being shown. This year the team should be exceptionally good because all last year's men except one are still in college. This leaves one position, third base, to be filled. For this there is a spirited contest on between Coville '13 and John son and Haskins '15. These men are all clever fielders and the man that gets the position will be the best hitter.

Shortstop is being held by Brewer, who played the position last year. He is hitting the ball hard and is a sure fielder. He is now out of the game for at least two weeks. His position will be filled by one of the extra third basemen. Ackerman is playing second base. He is a veteran of four years in that position. As an understudy Williams '15 is playing a good game. First base is being covered by Herb Brewer. who held that position last year. He is an exceptionally clever fielder and is well up in the team's batting order.

In the pitching department the team is especially well off. Heading the list are two men of long experience and nearly equal worth. Captain Williams and Sherman are alternating in the box and are both showing good form. To lyn team during Dahlen's suspension. date Sherman has done most of the work and Captain Williams has been vances Williams will take on the greater the game late this week. part of the work. On the receiving end is Huntington '13, who has played the position three years. He is an exceptional thrower and seldom it is that a man steals second. His hitting has been weak so far, but with practise he is expected to improve. TAFFETA COATEE WITH PEPLUM

One-piece sleeves and large armholes

COATEES of taffeta or other material worn over separate dresses are smart and attractive. They provide becoming little wraps while they do not mean any appreciable amount of weight or warmth. This one can be utilized for such treatment or made to match the skirt. As made on the figure it is finished with a single revers and the material is taffeta trimmed with puffings and little frills of the same.

As shown in the small front view, it is made to the natural line with a short peplum and without revers, and it is adapted to pongee, to linen and to all fabrics of the kind.

The one-piece sleeves are sewed to rather big armholes and the coatee is gathered at the lower edge and joined to a belt. It can be finished at either the high or natural waist line.

For the medium size will be required three yards of material 27, 134 yards 36, 1% yards 44 inches wide with % vard 27- for the .immings as shown

The pattern, No. 7432, cut in sizes for a 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42-inch bust measure, can be bought at any May Manton agency or will be sent by mail. Address 102 Vie t 32d street, New York, or Masonic Temple, Chicago.

ENGINEERS LOOK FOR REPLY FROM RAILROADS SOON

NEW YORK-Warren S. Stone, grand May 15 May 29 chief of the Brotherhood of Locomotive May 15 Engineers, said that the engineers expect May 25 a definite answer from the railroad managers today as to arbitration by a commission.

April 30 Mr. Stone said that he did not think the interstate commerce commission or the chief justice of the United States were qualified to appoint neutral members of a commission.

May 28 A meeting between the mediators and May 28 the managers was in progress this morning at the Hotel Manhattan. J. C. Stuart, vice-president and gen-4 eral manager of the Erie, chairman of it the committee, said that he hoped for 15 a settlement today, but would not predict it. He said that the declaration made in May 25 the managers' statement of last night that a proposition for arbitration had been turned down by the engineers had come from the federal mediators them-

Grand Chief Stone of the engineers denied this morning that such a proposi-May 25 tion had been made to him.

News of Importance From the Latin-American Centers

(Copyright 1912 by the Christian Science Publishing Society)

RAULIO HERNANDEZ, one time secretary of state of Chihuahua, and one of the central figures of both the Maderista and the anti-Maderista revolutions, has severed his connection with the last and with its leader, Pascual Orozco. With a profound knowledge of conditions-possessed by very few because Battle Is Expected at Any very few among his comrades have either his intellect or his culture knowledge of developments little and big, likewise of the men, little and big, of both revolutions, General Hernandez has manifestly come to the conclusion that there is no hope even of a temporary solution of the great national problem under the auspices of the present revolutionary movement. His one thought now is to stop ZAPATA. ON MARCH the war and to gather around the constituted government. He has sent a message to that effect to President Madero and has received an answer conveying the President's gratification.

A fortnight ago, Don Braulio Hernandez launched his appeal come, as Mexico believes, then Escalon, to the American people in these columns. Its directness in pointing the little railroad station in southern out the aspiration of the first revolution, the disappointment of the Chihuahua, will go down in history as period following its triumph, the aim of the second rising, was as admirable as its wealth of detail was illuminating. It was absolutely eivilized nations to a greater extent than free from personalities, yet a severer arraignment of the Madero any Latin American upheaval, the Maregime could scarcely be conceived. And today, its author turns dero revolution not excepted. For the away from the revolutionary movement that he has been foremost in promoting, turns back to the constituted government and its vexalarge measure, the future attitude of tion of spirit. Don Braulio, from an ardent revolutionist, has the United States, and thereby of the become a staunch evolutionist. His trend of thought is clear: great nations of Europe; and, there can whether or not Orozco is the man to lead the second "liberating herself, is watching events with the army" in triumph to Chapultepec is no longer the point at issue; the keenest interest, and that she, too, is point is that Orozco is not fit to be followed; and the conclusion is shaping a policy.

What had been foreseen is now be-Orozco, what?" must never be asked. If it should be asked there coming a fact; the campaign as far as could be but one answer, and the United States would give it.

All signs point to an imminent climax in the great drama—in Jimenez and Torreon, the first southern the conflict between the evolutionary and the revolutionary trend. base of Pascual Orozco, the last north-Whatever the outcome, from a military point, may prove to be, now ern stronghold of the federals. That is the time-and to many it would seem the very edge of it-under Orozco would not realize his ambition the fateful stress of the conflict, for the constructive element at last to take Torreon had become evident in the fateful stress of the conflict, for the constructive element at last the early part of the campaign, but it to assert itself and for the men of the hour to rise to the task. The was also manifest that the federals world is eagerly watching the lead of Braulio Hernandez away could not obtain an early foothold, if from the scuffle and back to work.

The theory that factories should be operated to meet the varying trade situations is not accepted by the conservative merchants as being altogether sound. As a matter of fact the goods of well-known manufacturers have a definite standard established in the minds of the trade, and to depart from it in order - to overcome uncontrollable environments has heretofore proved unprofitable, therefore statements made by some of the larger producers are convincing that standards will remain unchanged and prices will follow the stock

Reports show that the retail trade is not in favor of the early visits of the salesmen as it feels un prepared to make selections for a demand six months away. AN IMPORTANT SUIT

A legal decision most vitally affecting the future position of American Sugar in within a few days by the New Jersey courts. It involves, the question of the cancellation of the $10,000,000 common stock of the National Sugar Refining Company. This suit was brought early in February, 1911, and the findings of the court may be expected almost any day.

The National Sugar Refining Company has outstanding $10,000,000 preferred stock of which American Sugar owns $5,280,000, or a majority and $10,000,000 common stock. The recent strength in American Sugar shares and their advance to a high for the year of 131 is undoubtedly a belated market appreciation of the remarkable financial strength of this corporation. American Sugar has cash on deposit of over $21,000,000. It has a surplus equal to $46 per share of common stock. It has an annual average earning power for the $45,000,000 common stock of between 12 and 14 per cent.

The girl from the West perhaps was trying to quiz the girl from Boston, whose mother was a member of the Browning Club and attended Dr. Hale's church. The Detroit girl affirmed herself an omnivorous reader and her list of favorites caused Miss St. Botolph to twist round on her elbow with a new interest, "Yes," Miss Detroit was saying, "Lean read Emerson, though even if I don't understand him it wouldn't matter, for nobody else out there does. But I have never yet dared tell anybody at home that I can read Browning."

Miss St. Botolph replies with an air of conscious pride, "We don't find him so difficult in Boston. We study him so much. One lady wrote to him once to ask the meaning of a certain passage which everybody had disagreed about, and what do you think he answered? Matthew had a great ambition to rise in the world and be something better than his father had been. Sentiment and Civics

THE citizens of a leading city on the Pacific coast have just had a civic celebration with rose-planting as the universal duty. In a variety of ways adults and youth used the time for planting and adorning parks, squares, family gardens and places otherwise likely to spring up with weeds and tares. In a few days the citizens of the vast state of Texas are to celebrate "Mothers day." Maternity in all its noblest

"Mothers day." Maternity in all its noblest aspects is to be sung about, described in eloquent speech and brought home with vivid power to youth. If dutiful and appreciative, their filial virtues will thus be but more surely fixed; if wayward and prodigal, they may be led home to the persons whose love for them is most constant.

Here are but two of many illustrations right at hand to prove the thesis that American communities are more idealistic and less materialistic than they were twenty years ago. Ideas and ideals begin to challenge practicalities and possessions. The heart and the eye, love and beauty, now occasionally have their sway. How far the altered attitude is due to the habit of travel and the spoil in the way of enlarged visions of social achievement which tourists bring back, it certainly repetition of the courtesy of Japanese tourists to this country, recently shown in their presentation to the city of New York of several thousand cherry trees for planting on Riverside drive, will tend to strengthen ties of sentiment between the two peoples; and the initial action by the Japanese, in itself, is one of those admirable manifestations of sentiment, by a people only recently introduced to commerce and industry, which occidentals would do well to imitate.

Why should not states and cities occasionally be generous one to another? What is there in collective action that debars display of the graces and amenities which characterize the best types of individuals? The French republic, as such, is giving to the state of New York, as custodian of the Champlain monument soon to be unveiled, a bust of the explorer by Rodin. Here is a hint with a lesson. States and cities that have sentiment and imagination and are not wholly subordinate to calculating reason are, as compared with others, much more civilized and more attractive places of abode.

Seeing for One's Self In Tales of the Orient such as are typically exemplified in the "Arabian Nights," the narrator often lends interest to the story by describing the powerful ruler who assumed a disguise and went about among his people to find out precisely what they were saying about him and other agents of government. So informed, the ruler could then proceed intelligently about his business of ruling; if for the people's good, then with their just or unjust criticisms clearly in mind, and if with further personal aggrandizement in view, then aided for further acts of duplicity or arbitrary power by the knowledge surreptitiously obtained. A modern state or city executive often wishes that he might wander out among the people to overhear their estimates of him, might get behind the scenes of subordinates' cabals or know the bottom facts of alliances which he must obey or defy as an official. To get this information he may resort to strategy, using others. But he always would much prefer first-hand information. His own eyes and ears are witnesses that he would trust most.

This homily is prompted by the announcement that the young reform mayor of Cincinnati is dissatisfied with the evidence which others bring him about ways in which city departments are administered. He has no finance commission, independent and vigorous and designed for watchful and thorough probing, such as Boston's mayor can summon to aid him at any time. A long regime of machine politics has filled the subordinate posts with men who are not likely to tell Mayor Hunt any more facts than they have to. So the Cincinnati executive proposes to see things for himself. He is to sally forth from the executive offices, camp out at department headquarters, watch the official wheels go round, see how citizens are dealt with, and gather his own information. It sounds practicable. Much depends upon accuracy of observation and soundness of inference. Certainly he will emerge from the test wiser than if he sat still and took from others, at face value, whatever they proposed to make him believe.

Mayor Hunt's scheme does not include assuming a disguise and wandering about at night through bazaars and frequented places, hearing candid words. That is too far removed from American habits. Espionage, even in a good cause, is distasteful to the American man. Yet there is something to consider in the plan worked out by the oriental rulers whom fiction has immortalized.

Another Side to Porto Rico

MEYER BLOOMFIELD of the vocation bureau, who has been studying conditions in Porto Rico, is not as happily impressed with them as some other recent students of the island have been. If Mr. Bloomfield's mission should do no more, however, than to teach us to accept with a liberal thought the various and apparently conflicting testimony that comes from the different possessions, it would still have been worth while.

Mr. Bloomfield finds that the Porto Ricans are divided into two classes, the enormously rich and the extremely poor. He finds that the larger capitalists are doing relatively nothing for the public welfare. The rich men of the island show little appreciation of their opportunities. There is too much absenteeism. Class antagonism is developing, he says, as a result of all this. The want of sympathy among the prosperous for the masses of the people, who are toilers, is creating unrest, discontent and social and political discord and disturbance.

It may be said that, taken as a whole, the testimony that has reached the United States during the last two or three years, whether through officials or through representatives of the political parties or through delegates directly from the people, does not bear out Mr. Bloomfield's statements. One need not be actually on the ground to see that much of the evidence given with regard to the improvement of conditions on the island is influenced by comparison with conditions as they existed ten or twelve years ago. The working people of Porto Rico, it need not be said, are not even now on or anywhere near the plane of the working people of Europe or America, but they are, unless all the testimony is false, much better paid, much better fed and much better clothed and housed than they were a few years ago.

That Mr. Bloomfield has been able to see failure where others had seen progress and a fair measure of success in the task of lifting the Porto Ricans to a higher level, may be due simply to the fact that, for purposes of comparison, he has taken conditions as they are elsewhere rather than as they were in Porto Rico a few years ago. It is well that he has seen so clearly the other side of it. One mistake into which the United States should not fall is that of assuming, with self-satisfied air, that everything is all right when, as a matter of fact, everything may be all wrong. If the rich and prosperous in Porto Rico are shirking their obligations and responsibilities, if there is among them illegal evasion of taxation, if they are absenting themselves unduly from their estates, then these are matters that call for prompt and effectual redress. Mr. Bloomfield's statements should be taken and considered for what they are worth, without prejudice and with the purpose of reaching the truth and acting in accordance with it.

A NATIVE of Vermont endowed with Yankee shrewdness and thrift, who made a large fortune in Michigan lumber lands and in Chicago real estate, gained national fame as the patron of the "small college." Five million dollars were distributed by him on terms which brought thrice that sum into the treasuries of many of the smaller educational institutions of the West, the interior and the border states. He stripped himself and the border states. He stripped himself of all his property, save a small annuity, if thereby he might keep alive and in more robust fashion institutions remote from urban centers, providing education for deserving and self-supporting students, and positive in their religious and ethical influence on impres-

Why Small

Colleges

Were Aided

This Yankee donor, Dr. Pearsons, was not at all hesitant about imposing upon colleges which he aided conditions which some of them found it difficult to meet. His left hand knew all that his right hand gave. There was nothing secretive about his philanthropy. He forced other donors to action that often caused resentment. Nevertheless it must be admitted that the thoroughness of the man's devotion to his cause, and that, too, at a time when the emphasis everywhere in contemporary activity was on "bigness," forces admiration. He knew what the small college of New England had done for that section of the country in its effort to create a literate citizenship. He believed in the cultural type of education which still dominates the "small college" of America. He wished the youth of the heart of the country, lads from the farms and girls from the villages, to be educated under social conditions and in an environment more homelike to them than they would have if they found their way to urban centers and large universities.

In this role Dr. Pearsons was a conserving factor in the process of American education, and he lived long enough to see a reaction in the theory of higher education which tends to indorse his contention. There are a variety of reasons why many of the largest academic institutions, if they could, would gladly delegate to the isolated "small college" much of the work now done in the first two years of the collegiate departments of the universities. The superior opportunity of the small college for that education which comes from contact with fertilizing and character-creating personalities is apparent; so is its exemption from those diverting extra activities, social and intellectual, which tempt the youth who needs to concentrate, and who has neither time nor funds for a life that is dual in its loyalties.

Making Way for Traffic WITH Arlington street cut through from Boylston street to the newly developed Park square region a betterment of traffic conditions has been legalized in that region of Boston's retail trade. The authorization by the Legislature of widening of Avery street turns an insignificant alley, lying between West and Boylston streets and uniting Tremont and Washington streets, into a thoroughfare which will relieve congestion in an already crowded district. Now that the bill is passed, efforts are being made to induce the Governor to veto it. He is hearing arguments pro and con. The merits of the bill and the necessities of the situation are such that if it cannot be shown to be wrong in principle or to call for wasteful expenditure it should be signed. Negligence of remonstrants to act while the measure was being debated prior to enactment is no reason why the law should be defeated now.

The longer the operation of the new subway from Cambridge and places beyond is watched the more certain is the conviction that something must be done by the city to facilitate as much as possible the retail business of the section in which it is now planned to transform an alley into a street. Compared with sums that later may have to be spent for relief of congestion, the Avery street bill plan calls for a moderate amount. Care should have been taken in providing a maximum of betterments, thus to have reduced the expense to taxpayers in general; but the important thing now is opening of traffic at a reasonable cost.

It is said that Cleveland is now experimenting with a pay-asyou-leave car, probably with the idea of seeing whether it is possible to arrange things in any way so that the average passenger will actually have the nickel ready.

THE time may come, of course, when sowing on the great farms of the West will be done by aeroplane, but for the present the agricultural schools are confining themselves to instruction along other lines.

One of the latest inventions is a machine that will broil 700 steaks in six minutes. A machine that will broil one steak rightly in 15 minutes would be certain to become more popular.

Perhaps one reason why the newspaper humorists are not having as much fun as usual with the early strawberries this season is that the early strawberries this season are no joke.

THE one thing likely to result from a heated personal argument over politics is a wider difference of opinion than ever between the persons who engage in it.

THE world has had its stone age; it has passed out of its iron age within the memory of many; it is now well into its steel age, and it looks as if it were moving rapidly toward what with equal reason might be called its cement age. The bureau of statistics of the United States department of commerce and labor has been engaged in the collection of data bearing on this subject, with the result of discovering that the pro-

Use of Cement duction, consumption and exportation of cement in this country are all making remarkable gains. The quantity of cement produced, for instance, grew from 8,000,000 barrels in 1890 to 78,000,000 barrels in 1910, the value in the same period having increased from $6,000,000 to $69,000,000. It is probable that in no other branch of trade, with the possible exception of the automobile, has there been anything like the same growth.

Exportations of cement have increased from a mere valuation of $163,000 to $4,349,000 in ten years. In 1912 the quantity and value of the cement exported by the United States will probably amount to forty times as much as the quantity and value of the cement exportations of this country in 1900. From all appearances, the bureau points out, the United States is leading the world at present in the production of cement for industrial purposes. The production of Germany is less than half that of the United States, while the production of England is only two thirds that of Germany. Most of the 78,000,000 barrels of cement produced in this country in 1910 was consumed at home. Pennsylvania is the largest producer of cement among the American states, its product being about one third of the whole. The states following next in order are Indiana, Kansas, Illinois, Missouri, New Jersey, Michigan and New York.

The cement is of the character known as "Portland," and it may be interesting to the general reader to learn something of its composition. According to the United States geological survey, it is produced by burning a finely ground artificial mixture containing essentially lime, silica, alumina and iron oxide in certain definite proportions. The combination is formed by mixing limestone or marl with clay or shale, or by substituting low magnesia blast furnace slag for the clay or shale. It is through this slag connection that the United States Steel Corporation finds an entrance to the field and becomes almost a dominating influence in the industry.

The introduction of cement on a large scale has brought about many changes in the character of public improvements, in viaduct, bridge, tunnel, subway and sewer building, and in house construction. It has made, generally speaking, for economy, for cleanness and for neatness. It has by no means reached the limit of its employment. Within the last few years the "cement appearance," so objectionable to many where the composition is used in architecture, has been largely eliminated. It is capable of receiving various finishes, and, as may be seen in some of the newest subways, it can be marbleized and used for ornamentation in balustrades and wainscoting. Altogether, the cement age gives promise of being an agreeable one, providing that it does not run to extremes.

RECOMMENDATIONS for the improvement of the harbor of New York, made in a report submitted to the war department by Col. W. H. Black, engineer in charge of that port, have been transmitted to Congress by Secretary Stimson and are now before the House committee on rivers and harbors. They contemplate the deepening of channels in the Hudson river, at a cost of $1,570,000, for the greater accommodation of Atlantic liners. The projects involved are approved by General Bixby, chief of engineers. There is hardly a question but that they will have the approval of the committee and of Congress, for the simple reason that their necessity is made clear. It might be said with propriety in this connection that whenever New York has the improvement of its harbor in view no effort is spared by those representing the city to clarify the matter for the benefit of those representing the government.

It is shown in the present instance that increased depth in the Hudson is demanded in order to meet the requirements of the large transatlantic passenger vessels that ply as far up as Twenty-third street and the large freight carriers that go higher than that point. Conditions have changed in shipping during the last few years, and the modern harbor must adjust itself to these changes. The channels that were deep enough to accommodate the biggest liners a decade ago will not do today. The plan now is for the dredging of a channel 800 feet wide and 30 feet deep at mean low water off Ellis island to Newark street, Hoboken; to deepen an irregular-shaped shoal off Hamburg avenue to a depth of 40 feet; to dredge a channel 550 feet wide and 20 feet deep along the Weehawken-Edgewater waterfront; to remove an irregular-shaped shoal in the east side of the river between West Nineteenth street and West Thirty-second street to a depth of 40 feet, and to remove rock near the Battery and an obstruction near Spuyten Duyvil creek.

These details are worthy of consideration, because they may serve to show other ports that are looking forward to increased business how thoroughly and sweepingly New York goes about its harbor affairs. Nothing is asked here that will not appear reasonable; there is no hesitation about asking for everything that is necessary to improve the channels of the leading harbor of the country. Would not the attention to details, the thoroughness and clearness, so manifest in the procedure of New York, not only here but in all such cases, be valuable to other ports in pressing forward their claims for government aid to improvements? The commerce of the country is growing rapidly; unusual impetus will be given the shipping industry by the opening of the Panama canal. The nation will not be penurious in dealing with those ports that can and will show good cause for claiming appropriations, but it is a first essential that the claims shall be set forth clearly and fully and that they be prosecuted vigorously.

THAT Congress continues to sit through it all is something for which the United States should congratulate itself. Things are not as complicated as they might be if the members of both houses were free to take the stump.

FOUR THOUSAND more sailors and 400 more marines are wanted at once for the navy, and it is not altogether a deplorable thing that young men are in such demand elsewhere that recruits are hard to get.
